Short Description:

Through this story, you'll be one of the boys roaming free. At Dr. Terror's House of Horrors, you'll be with black and white children in the movie theatre – segregated, yet stuffed together – during a partly live touring matinee. Then hop on your bike with the boys as they pass back and forth across the racial boundaries of the times. The scenery is Southern, but the themes are universal, and the lessons speak straight to the heart.

Long Description:

Andy was one of the boys on bikes, freewheeling through the hot Southern summers. Johnny and Kenny are Andy's friends, black brothers, together with Andy growing strong and learning how to get around 1960's Georgia. "I had a Vrrrrroom motor, but Johnny and Kenny didn't have one, so I took mine off and we all put cards in our spokes."
